Education

My degree in Interaction Design has taught me to keep the user in focus; design towards solutions; as well as given me an insight into the basis of backend development. I very much enjoyed gathering data from users and figuring out how to translate this to designs.

Free Time

I love learning new things and getting good at them. It sounds cliché, but I love seeing improvement in my drawing skills, just like I feel a certain pride when I notice my progress in understanding Italian as self-taught. My interest in learning new languages may have a connection to my interest in seeing the world and its cultures.

Though I love experiencing other countries, I also love a good night in. To me, an ideal evening could just as well consist of having a couple of friends over for dinner and a glass of wine, followed by, for instance, a board game.
